

REPORT FROM YORKSHIRE FORUM

I attended the Yorkshire Nationalist Forum in Bradford last Saturday, 1st April. I had not intended to go but Gary Raikes asked me to go in his place as he could not attend with what had happened a day earlier. A 'credible threat' had been made and Gary decided, this time, to support his wife rather than attend the meeting 400 miles away. At the meeting, I wasn't expecting a lot other than a load of old men talking about the good old days and the finer points on political matters, but I was wrong. There was a very wide age range of activists there and in representation. The old gang there would acknowledge they had failed over the past 40 years but were very open to new ideas or to listen to new ideas of ways forward. This came very apparent when I later came to find out who the speakers were. I feel I had attended a very special edition of the forum this month although I had been asked to cover my black shirt 'flash and circle' patch!

The whole session of talks will be on video, YouTube, soon, so I will not try and repeat what was said and try and do as good a job. The first speaker talked about how popular fascism was in Yorkshire in the 1930's where 10,000's would turn out to fascist meets.

I was second speaker but only to read out Gary's statement. In the statement there was criticism of the BNP's former MEP's. Only after I had sat down later that I realised that it was Andrew Brons MEP sat at the front! And he had questioned me about whether I really thought that the MEP's had done no good. (Apart from lining their own pockets and splitting the BNP no they did no good....Editor) The other two speakers down to talk were Kevin Layzall and Alex Davies who I had never heard of and were not properly introduced. Only that evening, while doing some research, I found out what serious activists they are. Although National Action is 'no more' having been banned, I doubt these two will be going into retirement anytime soon. Alex gave a excellent talk, as he has a reputation for. Towards the end, someone did ask, 'So what are we going to do?' I could easily have stood up, gone back to the stand and spoke. I would not have dared to reveal all my ideas, I love to see daylight too much. One step would be the closing down of Halal, total closure. Halal slaughter has no place in our Christian lands. The meat factories, the haulage and the shops dealing with it would come under our activism. How would our Liberal-Thugs go about it, how would we go about it if we had the thuggish mentality of these Reds? What would happen if a sector of the people of these lands were denied their Halal meat?

BALLOT BOX FUTILITY

Taken from 'Party time has ended' by Colin Jordan

The very raison d'être of a political party is to appeal sufficiently to the masses so as to obtain sufficient votes in elections as to attain state power, and thus to form a government of the country. Nationalist parties have been operating for decades to this end, and yet have failed to obtain or even come near to obtaining a single seat in Parliament, let alone a necessary majority in Parliament, meaning hundreds of seats. While during those decades the plight of our race and nation has worsened and worsened, such parties have come no nearer success.

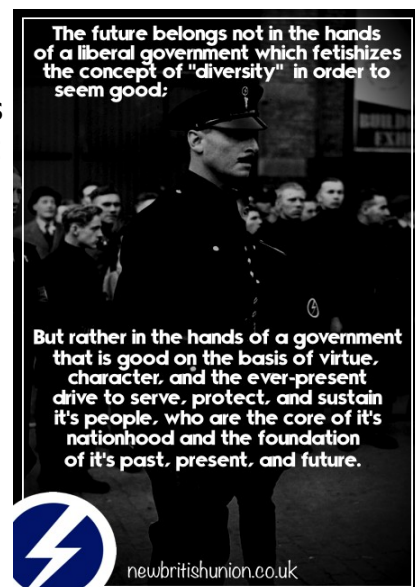

Some seek to account for this obvious failure to become sufficiently known and acceptable to the masses as a failure to trim policy sufficiently for this political market, including a failure to avoid the stigma of "nazi" and "extremist". Their remedy is to convert themselves that much more to the masses, instead of seeking to convert the masses to them, thus seeking to compete with the established parties on their own ground by coming closer to them, while still lacking all the advantages of infrastructure which those orthodox parties possess. Such people, priding themselves on their astuteness, perpetrate the absurdity of abandoning the capacity to reform in pursuit of the opportunity to reform.

In deep privacy and with a crafty wink, some will confide that their contortions are only window-dressing, and that when in power they will show their true colours. Their true colours, apparent enough already, amount to constitutional weakness. Such are the workings of such frailty that, giving way to it now, come the pay-off they would never have the strength to transcend it. The smears they fear and vainly attempt to distance themselves from are but the concomitant of all adequate proposals for national and racial resurgence, avoidable only by a shameful procedure of self-sterilization.

Others of sterner stuff concede that electoral success is out of reach, but argue that electioneering is nevertheless justified for the sake of the resulting publicity and recruitment. However, to prove their point they need to show, and fail to show, that the gain in whatever quantity and quality of support resulting from such electioneering at least equals, if not exceeds, the gain to be achieved through an equal expenditure of time and money in other ways. One thing such electioneering certainly does not achieve is that manifestation which more than that of intellect and ideals moves the masses - the manifestation of strength - for it almost always results in a miserable manifestation of weakness.

WHY NEW BRITISH UNION-WHY NOW

A major national survey (taken May 2005) has shown that political disaffection is by far the biggest factor behind low turn out at recent elections

The survey of people who were registered to vote but who didn't was commissioned by the Power Inquiry, a year long inquiry into falling political participation including election turnouts and growing disillusionment with sham British democracy.

KEY FINDINGS

Most non-voters (54%) when asked what would encourage them to vote said, politicians keeping their promises (some hope!) the figure rose for the 18-24 year old to 72%. Of course keeping promises is impossible under the present democratic system which puts an opposition party in Westminster who do all they can to derail the government of the day in the hope of replacing them at the next election.

When asked what was the main reason for not voting 36% cited a lack of difference between parties and that politicians 'could not be trusted', as this was taken back in 2005 one can only imagine how high that percentage is now.

Only 19% cited apathy as a reason for not voting. This is important to note as it clearly shows that the vast majority of non voters would vote if they felt they had something worth voting for.

More than 90% identified three or more political issues that mattered to them despite the fact that 66% declared themselves as disinterested in politics-suggesting that many non-voters do not connect the issues that concern them to parliamentary talking shop politics.

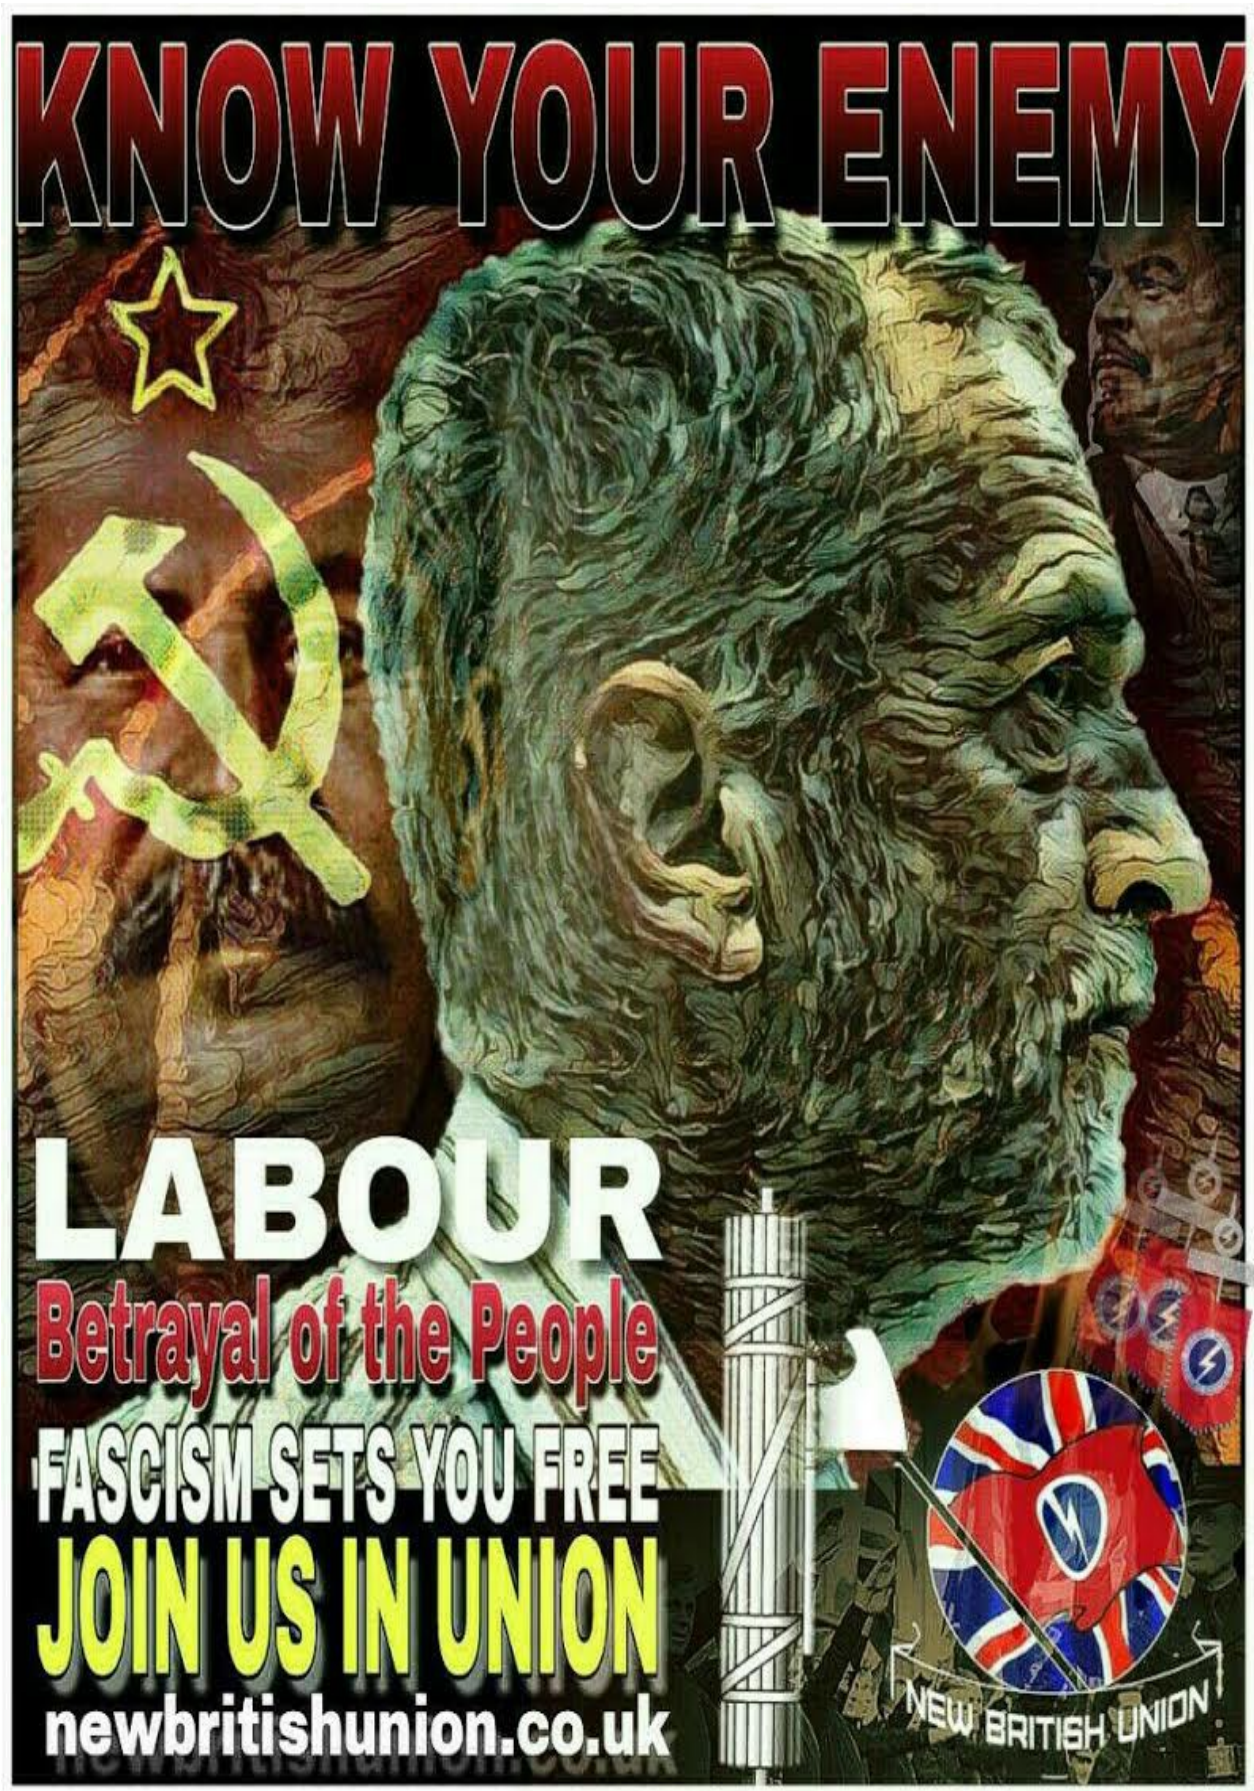

Power Inquiry chair Helena Kennedy QC said "It is not good enough to blame low turnouts on voter apathy. People very clearly care about important issues they just don't trust the politicians or the processes by which they claim their mandates".

This report is from 2005, 12 years ago, since then we have seen the expense scandal break and the election of an oxymoronic coalition government whose MP's take part in 'reality' TV shows in pathetic attempts to curry public favour. Liberals lost seats at the election yet their leader was deputy Prime Minister as Mosley said "all good old fellows on the benches together".

Over recent years it began to become clear to myself that a form of fascism would be required to save our once great country, that it hasn't yet formed in the minds of the people is down to us to rectify.

The time is now right that is why I launched New British Union a movement of the people against the political class and the enemies of Britain. Mosley was right eighty years ago he remains right today, October 1932 saw the flag of British Union raised in Britain for the first time, January 2013 saw it flying proudly once again.

Lets rally the people and work to get our message to the masses ACTION IN UNITY.

THE LIES THEY TELL

1) We are being lied to about unity ("one race the human race.") The truth is there are any number of ways to subdivide the so-called "human race" according to various criteria and along various lines. The lie of unity is advanced to conflate different things as equal.

2) We are being lied to about equality. Just as no human individual is exactly equal to another, neither are any identifiable groups exactly equal to one another, in their averages or distributions of traits and characteristics. Some individuals and groups are shockingly unequal. The lie of equality is advanced to justify diversity and redistribution.

3) We are being lied to about diversity. We are told that diversity is our strength and that it has benefits which are worth its cost. In most cases this is untrue, except to the worthless parasites who are generally classified as "diversity." Diversity is great for them, not for whoever has to pay for it, in handouts, entitlements, the erosion of race, nation, culture, the breakdown in trust and civic engagement, and all of the other ways. "Diversity" is a lie aimed specifically at our delegitimization, dispossession, disenfranchisement, and destruction through demographic displacement.

4) We are being lied to about immigration.

America was not a nation of immigrants until the 1960s, and the rhetoric didn't really become reality in most places until probably at least the 1980s or 1990s. It does not benefit us in any way to accept, welcome, or tolerate most of these people, but it costs us quite a bit.

5) We are being lied to about tolerance. It is not an absolute or unlimited virtue or value, but a very limited and contextual one. Outside of those limits and that context, it has negative value, and those definitely aren't large enough to include Islam.

6) We're being lied to about Islam, it is not a religion of peace. Enough said...

We can no longer afford to bear the cost of these lies, or others, and the malicious, self-serving, lying, liars who lie them.

HAVE YOUR SAY

A few month since Frank and me were chatting in Crown here on Sleetmoor one Sunday dinner [where else would you be on a Sunday dinner?] and I mentioned that lots of television adverts now were using a black or Asian actor alongside an English one as a married couple or partners in such adverts. This bothered Frank as well. Not long after this Athelney Books sent me a copy of a book called White Wyrms Rising - a journey into modern English nationalism. This was to see what I thought of it before they decided whether to bring it out or not. I had a few criticisms of it not least the fact the Edmund Dee used metric terms whenever mentioning any distances! The book was not published but interestingly on page 64 he mentions the mixed race adverts and that on the "soaps" so many families are now like that. As I don't watch any soaps I didn't know that but it adds to the argument. This would seem to be part of a campaign to get us to accept such arrangements as normal and thus help to destroy Englishness. This might not be as obvious as the ethnic cleansing of English folks from a lot of London, Leicester and even Derby [not children. Thank you for that I ever go to such places!] existing. but it is part of the same plot being carried out by our politically correct rulers who are the after-comers [descendants] of the Anglo-Normans.

A few week since I swapped over from the Co-op Bank to Nationwide where most of my investments already are but not my current account. They sent me a very good introductory pack headed "Welcome to something a bit special". Lo and behold it has a glossy picture on front of a nice, fair haired English woman and her partner - a black bloke and a half caste child! FOR ONCE I HAVE NO IDEA WHAT WE CAN DO.

Wesan ge hale,

Gran.

I am familiar with Mosley and his ideas, and I am aware of the level to which we are lied to and manipulated by certain malevolent parities, and I am filled with hope at the real prospect of a better future. This, as you know too well, can only and will only be achieved through a tight and sharp sense of duty and cohesion among our people. I am proud to be involved in securing a whole and prosperous future for our children. Thank you for existing.

All media is NUJ controlled and dominated with a far left agenda.

Even thought one or two reporters might actually have an almost open mind you can rest assured their editors don't . Any interview given , should it not go the way the reporter or his editor intends will simply be twisted out of context , or forgotten about as if it never happened . The old adage "any news is good news " is a load of bollocks , Joe Public is mentally retarded and unable to separate truth from bullshit so latches onto the crap they read printed in the papers , claim they don't believe everything they read , then believe everything they read . Everyone is entitled to their personal opinion naturally , but that opinion is simply that , their opinion . I was given the offer to be given an interview by the Press and

Journal a few years ago , I politely declined the privilege of having their reporter interview me , fabricate my replies , then report I was planning to gas the Jews.

FRIENDS OF THE LEAGUE OF ST GEORGE (FLSG) is an Independent Club which promotes support for the League of St George and the LSG quarterly magazine "League Sentinel". The FLSG was originally founded in 1974 and was advertised in the LSG monthly journal of the time called "League Review" as follows: "FRIENDS OF THE LEAGUE OF ST GEORGE. If you would like to become a member of the League and meet others with similar ideas. If you want to do something to make Britain a better place to live in. If you believe in social justice. If you believe the government should put its own people first. If you are against Communism." The FLSG has recently been revived and meetings, socials, camps and visits to European Patriots on the Continent are planned to take place in future. Contact us:

I have had a whole afternoon trying to debate with a room of young liberals at a university, I have never met so many privileged middle class self loathing twisted human beings in my life.

Their inability to grasp a different world view is quite staggering, as is their unwillingness to even accept they may be incorrect in their way of thinking. The 'girls' idea of debate is to shout as loud as they can at any of the boys who may hold a different opinion, the boys on the whole seem to lack any masculine trait and bay slogans sheep-like in a clear attempt to close down any meaningful dialogue. A hardcore minority made it clear that if they had known earlier about the meeting they would never of allowed it to go ahead! When asked about freedom of speech I was told that it doesn't apply to fascists that I shouldn't be here and why don't I 'go away', when I pointed out that if I said that to the foreign students in the room I would be convicted of committing a hate crime they cheered, completely missing the point! You just can't make this stuff up! Share a trench with these guys? I wouldn't like to share a toilet with them! If these people are the future Britain will never win a war again. Gary Raikes

History appears to be repeating itself in Syria.

Those of us who openly and publicly supported Serbia in the 1990s civil war in Yugoslavia see history repeating itself now in Syria.

During February 1994, a mortar bomb was fired into the main square of Sarajevo. Muslim forces defending the city straight away blamed the Serbs and were backed up in this, first by the UK and then the US.

When UN experts looked into this, they concluded that the bomb had had been fired by a Bosnian Army position. It was further concluded that the Muslims had fired on their own people to provoke NATO to come in and fight on the Islamic side. This worked.

The ISIS fighters in Syria will do anything to discredit President Assad's regime, including using tactics akin to those used in Sarajevo. It seems history does repeat itself.

In 2014 the UN took possession of all the Syrian government's stock of chemical weapons but was unable to search those parts of the country held by the rebels. It is well known that rebels captured some stocks of chemical weapons and they are proven already to use them even against their own people if it gains them an advantage.

Already Donald Trump has used this as an excuse to illegally bomb a Syrian Army airfield with 59 cruise missiles. Those of us who openly welcomed Trump as US president now wonder if he can break his oft-stated denial that the US would intervene in Syria. How many of his other promises will he keep?

Granville V Stone

Since this letter was written a few days ago I have learnt that the propaganda put out by Alastair Campbell that many thousands of young Muslim Albanians were missing believed massacred in Serbian concentration camps was a lie! Post war investigations could find no trace of this massive alleged atrocity.

Also, and very quietly last year, the International Tribunal exonerated the late Yugoslav leader, Slobodan Milosovic, from complicity in any atrocities in Bosnia. This unfortunate man was once characterised as "the butcher of the Balkans". For what it is worth our support for him was justified.

So before anybody rushes into judgement on the horrific pictures from Syria ask the question: Who stands to benefit from this atrocity. Certainly not President Assad!

NEW BRITISH UNION NEWSFLASH

With interest in NBU at an all time high journalists have crawled out of the gutter to 'report' on the movement.

This is a reminder to all officers and ordinary members if approached by the media DO NOT ANSWER ANY OF THEIR QUESTIONS simply say "no comment I have been instructed not to talk to you". Simply direct them to NBU office secretary to deal with their requests. These people will not report on us favourably in anyway or form, do not be fooled by their friendly manner or talking 'off the record' all they want is one sensational quote, they will take whatever you say out of context, they will twist the meaning, misrepresent and even lie outright to get a story. Anyone who talks to reporters without prior permission from the leader will be expelled from the movement. Discipline is key to our success!

NBU Office

After watching the video of Clive speaking at the Yorkshire Forum I would like to answer a couple of the rather hostile questions put to him. Firstly the absurd suggestion that I 'bottled out of attending' I had a good reason not to attend and so not to let Liam, the organiser, down I asked Clive to cover for me. I have spent the last five years travelling to talk with people across the UK what made the person who put this forward think that Yorkshire was in anyway problematic for me is beyond comprehension. So too the question about who our independent councillors are. Did this person really believe that giving out our members names and where they sit would be a sensible course of action? The fact is if people don't believe us fine, what they choose to believe is of no importance. We have people sitting on councils across Britain making a difference that is all that matters. As for the question of repatriation, if you think that would be even possible in the 21st century you are deluding yourself. It would seem that some people at the meeting are happy to carry on in the same old way with the same old parties getting the same old results, or should that be same old failures. Is it any wonder the youth of Britain are flocking to the Blackshirt banner.

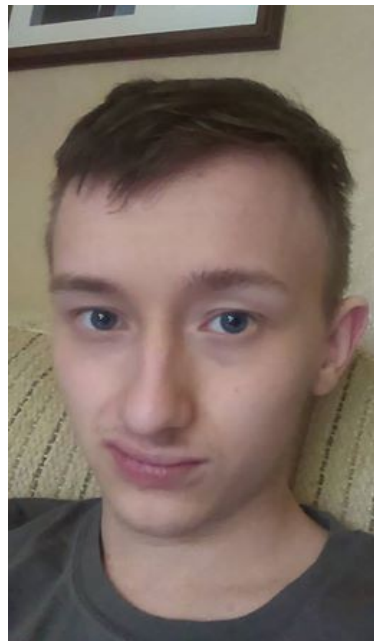

FEATURED OFFICERS

remembering the story's from out he was fascinated by my grandparents. I decided to join, the position for regional officer became vacant which I went for & I was surprised when I got it I'm still finding my feet in the NBU & hopefully I have a future serving the NBU my country & it's people.

TERRY MAYERS
NBU SOUTH EAST

Hi my name is Terry Mayers I am the regional officer for the South East. I am probably the baby amongst the group as I have only been a member for about a year now & regional officer for about 4 months. Previously I was in the National Front then the BNP but left when Griffin took over which should of never happened (my opinion) a good example of backstabbing by Griffin who later went on to destroy the party. I did look into rejoining the BNP after Griffin was removed but found it stagnant & not offering anything that it did under the good old days of Tyndall. I thought about going back to the national front but decided against it. I came across the NBU I had always admired the work of Mosley &

Hello everyone , I am Chris.J.Boardman, I currently live in the North West - UK and for quite some time I have been looking at "Fascism" and to be quite honest with you. It is not bad as you may think. The past few years I have been observing 'The New British Union' - I did my research into Oswald Mosley - I found Mussolini during/before the world war(s) and the predecessor to the NBU were called The British Union of Fascists. The party's main focus was to promote peace and unity within Britain, however people at the time were blind by the promises of the same old parties that we see today too, yet those parties that destroyed the old party, simply because they disagreed with our views and caused violence within the meetings from what I have found out. It is their mentality that has led me to switch sides so to speak.

I have come from a household that supports basically LibDems/Greens and Labor. I did vote UKIP in 2015 because I believe brexit is brexit. There's nothing more to it. The fact that the EU wants us to pay MORE money just to leave is also a sham. I will not allow these political elites, who are not really that interested in the people but themselves, their own gain in power and control over everyone, yes people are that sick. So I joined this party to fight against the "AntiFascists" - #ANTIFA -They resort to violence just to prove their own point, it is pathetic and they should be banned if they keep using violence and verbal threats just to achieve their goals. I strongly condemn this organisation. It is just a bunch of anarchists that are up to no good. No discipline what so ever.

I will not be by their side. I will not be a part of the side who will use violence or banning a party just because we simply disagree with them. That is what Marxist parties do, they're un-democratic as ironic that may seem.

These Marxist parties have one thing in common, they all lie, they all promise but never really deliver and if they do, it is not all that common what's so ever.

I am 21 years of age, I have studied in college and love to learn new things.

Why do I think this party will succeed? Where do I see us in the future? Well a lot of things can happen for sure but I am optimistic that we will pave the way for the British workers to have a decent wage, to help the working class, tackle poverty and most importantly stop the privatization of the NHS. We will succeed but please do remember, we're not here to make empty promises. we're here to do work not just talk like the old parties. In order for us to succeed as a political party, as a movement. We have to fail from time to time, it is impossible to succeed if we do not learn from any of our mistakes that we have made or ever will make, we are not perfect but we can certainly strive to be perfect.

So the answer to the second question "Where do I see us in the future?" Whilst we have a long way to go and there may be some time till we actually go to the polls, firstly we need to build our foundation and gain some ground, we need to earn your trust. The people, the people have been lied to and messed about with for far too long and I am absolutely tired of it, which is one of the main reasons for me joining this party, I have not joined just to play 'party' politics, I have joined to dedicate my life to this movement.

I am a freelance journalist and I love to help people with mental health issues. I am a true patriot and nationalist at heart. I love the English flag and the British Union Jack. It is NOT racist to wave your nationality above, this government and the governments before it, declared war on nationality pride. Stand up against this tyranny and say no to this idiocy.

I want to see a stronger Britain. Mental health is poor near and in the regions where I live, I am not going to sit idly by and let our people be destroyed from within. Do not be disheartened. We're here. I hope what I wrote is some hope to us all. Do not allow the negativity from the radicalized left get to you ,in time they will come to their senses.

Thank you for taking your time to read all of this but I do legitimate care about the concerns of my people in my area and the rest of the United Kingdom. Keep up the good fight. especially the Youth, youth are our only hope for any chance of success. Shine that flame torch high in the sky, it has dimmed but the flame has never been truly put out. We stand firm, we're not going anywhere. They may ban us, persecute us, kill us but we will never concede to defeat, the heart of the movement is within the heart of the people and they will never take this from us. They can try but will fail absolutely miserably.

Use your anger and frustration to create motivation, positive action and change for the greater good for your community.

Hail Raikes

STATEMENT READ OUT AT YORKSHIRE FORUM

We are in a top down system instigating change that will take ages to reach grass root level. Demonstrations are held as a result of the people's frustration at a perceived injustice that is not being addressed. They focus the establishment's attention upon a specific issue for a very brief moment with the result that a number of political elite talking heads appear and spout soothing words to the masses. The wheels of democracy begin their slow turning and eventually, maybe, one day something gets done!

This is the problem that NBU is trying to address. To combat political correctness we have to replace the liberal infected level of bureaucracy that exists at the grass roots of community life. If all the people on all the different street demos actually got involved at a community level in all the many groups/councils/committees/associations that make up every community we would install long needed common-sense back into procedures. We could influence the decision making process and avoid the need to protest in the first place. Change things from the ground up.

It is by cutting the roots that the plant starts to die, and dies from the top down. Fighting elections to sit on top of the tree may be good for the candidate's ego but in reality will change absolutely nothing. If anyone can point out what good having two BNP members elected as MEPs has done for that party or the nationalist movement please feel free to enlighten me.

NBU 'Operation Citadel' is the way forward, it may not be a high profile, headline grabbing, attention seeking, flag flying event but it is our only hope of building the strongholds we are going to need if we are to survive as a people. The flag flying marches will come later! If you would like to know more about 'Operation Citadel' and the NBU please contact secretary@newbritishunion.co.uk or why not reserve a ticket for our annual conference and find out in person?

The British Fascisti "The Rise of British Fascism"

ROTHA LINTORN-ORMAN

Although Sir Oswald Mosley (1896-1980), our patron saint, is the one who essentially set the foundations for our particular movement, the one who created the "British Union of Fascists" (BUF), our predecessor, and essentially dominates the sphere of British Fascism. The true roots of British Fascism lies with a discredited native of London, Rotha Lintorn-Orman (1895-1935).

She was born "Rotha Beryl Orman" to Major Charles Edward Orman, and founded the "British Fascisti" or "British Fascists" in 1923, two years after Benito Mussolini formed the "National Fascist Party", a party that ruled Italy from 1922 until Mussolini's ousting in 1943. Amongst the members of the "British Fascisti" were William 'Lord

Haw-Haw' Joyce (1906-1946), an avid fascist and Nazi propaganda broadcaster,

WILLIAM JOYCE

Neil Hawkins (1903-1950), who later played an important role in the "British Union of Fascists", Charles Knight (1900-1968), an English spy and broadcaster and lastly, Arnold Leese (1878-1956).

ARNOLD LEESE

The formation of the "British Fascisti" was born out of the fear of the left wing, the detested communists, who were a threatening force during this time. Orman had a right to fear the left wing, she published an article in The Patriot, which aimed at seeking out anti-communists, and through this her party was forged. During the time she formed the "British Fascisti" the "Third Communist International" or "Comintern" was under way. The "Comintern" was founded by Vladimir Lenin on the 2nd of March 1919 and was purposed at spreading communism on an International scale, infecting the mind's of the people. Similar to Mosley, Orman served during the First World War. She served with the "Women's Ambulance Reserve", and was decorated for her contributions to the war effort, in particular that of her assistance during the Great Thessaloniki Fire of 1917, a fire that destroyed a considerable amount of Thessaloniki, one of the largest city's in Greece.

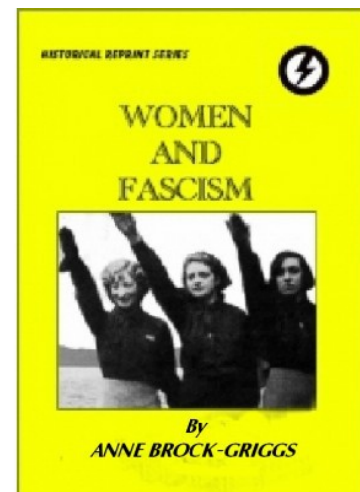

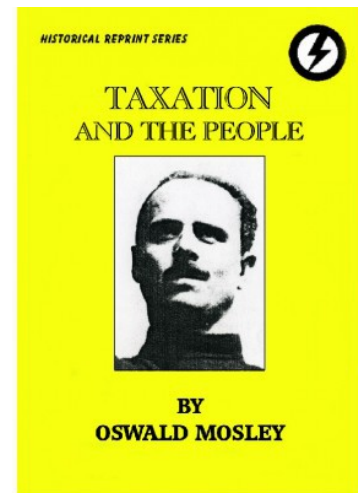

Rotha Lintorn-Orman admired Benito Mussolini, and attached herself to Fascism. Although she was essentially a conservative in spirit, with an anti-communist agenda. Her party ran into problems, she personally worked within the law and clung on to the Conservative Party, as a result the "British Fascist" was not advancing and made little progress. Many defected to splinter groups such as the "Imperial Fascist League" and the "British Union of Fascists", under Mosley. Orman considered Mosley to be close to a communist and protested that she would not join the BUF. Most of her membership defected to the BUF, and in 1935, after falling ill in 1933 and succumbing to a lifestyle of vices, including drug taking, the excessive consumption of alcohol and promiscuous behaviour, she died in the Canary Islands at only forty years of age.

To conclude, it is perfectly sound to utter the view that Rotha Lintorn-Orman was overshadowed by Sir Oswald Mosley, and wasn't given the full credit that she truly deserved. However, it is important to recognise that Rotha Lintorn-Orman was the one that sparked the flame, and it was Mosley who carried the flame that we, the British people, now bear today.

Never forget the origins of our prosperous, civilised, and glorious political ideology, Fascism.
